

SICKENED BY SICKO?

Don't let HMOs buy off our next president.

Our health care system is broken, and the next president must fix it. Several 2008 candidates—John Edwards, Dennis Kucinich, and Barack Obama—have plans to guarantee affordable health care for everyone with a public insurance option. These are the most forward-thinking proposals ever seen in a presidential race.

But the HMOs, big health insurers, and drug companies are busy trying to buy off White House hopefuls with lots of campaign cash. They want to keep making billions by denying Americans affordable health care.

Not one more person should suffer or die because our leaders won't stand up to the companies at the root of our health care problems.

Ask the presidential candidates to promise not to take campaign money from any corporate PACs, lobbyists, or executives of HMOs, big health insurers, and drug companies.

Get out your cell phone or call as soon as you get home, and we'll connect you to the presidential candidates of your choice—toll-free. Ask them to make this promise today.
